THE WORST RESULTS

For The Future Of The State
University

From Political Interference
With Institution

Through Collusion of Willis
And Pres. Thompson

Resentment Growing For Setting Back Agriculture

In Making University A Foot
Ball For Politics

Columbus, O., May 13.—The political interference with the conduct of affairs at the Ohio State university threatens the worst possible results for the future of Ohio's great educational institution. Especially is this true of the agricultural department, where in collusion with President Thompson, Governor Willis appears to have reached through the amenable board of trustees, to secure the demolition of Dean Homer C. Price, a Republican, whose crime was that he had been honored by Governor Cox in spite of his politics. Now Dean Price will resign the place he made and has held for fourteen years and of which he has made a success. The political domination and interference will not have reached its worst until not only is the agricultural department ruined, but every branch of the university depreciated. As a result of the scandal which is growing, parents are writing their sons in the agricultural college to close up their work as they feel the best results cannot be had from an institution of learning where petty politics is allowed to interfere with matters of education as in the case of actions since Governor Willis assumed office.

As the days pass and Dean Price is denied the reason for the action taken against him, the reason is being supplied by others. Appearing first that it is the jealousy of President Thompson whose desire is for all things great and small, it further is shown that Governor Willis took advantage of that jealousy to secure the automatic removal of the dean from the state agricultural commission.

Other things that the educational facilities of the state are threatened, and if the present tendency of the state government and the Ohio State University management is allowed to continue, the farming interests of the state will lose such support as is now coming to the agricultural interests from the federal government through the agencies and economies fostered by the preceding state administration.

Every day the feeling of resentment is growing against Governor Willis and the Republican legislature for the steps taken to set back the cause of agriculture in the mud and place its future in the meanest kind of partisan politics. It is a matter of odious comparison for the Willis method, that when Cox was governor steps were taken to unify all the interests in a way that saved more than $75,000 to the state the first year, and that party politics were eliminated in the formation of a supervising board which did not add a single office but eliminated an even dozen; now the number of offices has been increased three-fold, there is no unity of effort, dissension is threatened between the agricultural college and the state experiment station, expense is bound to increase, and party politics abounds under the Willis law. Under the Cox idea of centralization and saving there were five commissioners each of whom had already been employed by the state in co-ordinate capacity, and not a single one of them sought the job to which he was appointed, or had the endorsement of a political committee; under the Willis decentralization idea there are ten members of a main board and five members of an advisory board—adding ten new offices, and every man who seeks appointment is going, not to the farmer, but to the ward healer for his endorsement. If referendum should be brought on such a plan where is the man who will have the temerity to defend the Willis program?

Governor Willis thought he had secured a divorce from Mary E. Lee, the female lobbyist who says she represents the Grange and a certain school federation, after she had helped win the agricultural ripper, but she pleads non-suit and is on the job to keep the legislature from adjourning this week.

Why shouldn't any citizen like the job of legislator? He has to work not more than three days a week, and about three hours a day. Private benefits at state expense are regularly voted. Carnations and pocket knives have been known to grow as "supplies;" and when the lobby is prolific as their year there's lots of things on the side. No wonder they won't quit and go home!

The members of the session and of the trustees of the Presbyterian church, together with their wives, were delightfully entertained at a six o'clock dinner last evening by their pastor, Rev. W. A. Clemmer, in the social rooms of the church. Twenty-six were seated at the table, only one being absent, he being unavoidably out of the city. During the dinner and after it, through the kindness of Mr. F. L. Young, the guests enjoyed some choice selections on the Victrola. Rev.
